Private Membership Associations

Did you have a business shut down last year because of mandates due to this pandemic? Were you upset, felt like you were not in control of your business or life? What if there were guarantees put in place where you could have stayed open, but you didn’t know about them? How life-changing would it be if you never had to shut down again? What about not having to worry about government overreach. What if I told you there was a way to make this all happen in as little as two weeks? The answer is based on the United States Constitution and standing case laws.

What is a P.M.A.? A PMA (Private Membership Association) consists of founding documents written to take your business out of the public and into the private. Let’s say you have an L.L.C., a public business subject to state and federal law. If you took that same business and converted it into a P.M.A., you would be operating entirely privately. Why is that important? Because operating entirely in the private keeps the eyes of the state and federal government out of your business. A properly formed P.M.A. is

Liberty is our Natural Condition

By Karen Kwiatkowski

The challenge facing us now, and in coming year, is about power – who will have it, how it will be wielded, and to what end. The US government has spent literally trillions of dollars to concentrate its power, and to design systems with which to manage and control all materials, resources, human lives and activities.

The COVID “response” is an excellent barometer of the real aim of government, and its proficiency at driving the human herd. H.L. Mencken’s observation from a century ago has certainly aged well. Civilization, in fact, grows more and more maudlin and hysterical; especially under democracy it tends to degenerate into a mere combat of crazes; the whole aim of practical politics is to keep the populace alarmed (and hence clamorous to be led to safety) by menacing it with an endless series of hobgoblins, most of them imaginary.

Power is being extracted from individuals, families, and communities by a voracious federal government. Many Americans, as Mencken would have predicted and did observe, are voluntarily ceding productive citizens start to feel personally ignored, mistreated and abused by those in power, there are often several stages those people go through. If they’ve always seen themselves as good citizens because they’ve always “followed the rules,” it can be a bit of a shock when they come to realize that “the rules,” more often than not, benefit a few greedy crooks and harm everyone else. Theoretically, “the rules” should describe how people should behave so that we can all peacefully get along, cooperate and organize for mutual benefit. Make It Happen

In 2020 and 2021 we’ve seen unprecedented levels of authoritarian power grabs, all over the world, carried out in the name of “protecting” people (which is always the excuse tyrants give for what they do). But that authoritarian insanity has also resulted in an unprecedented number of people starting to question things—and more importantly, an unprecedented number of people disobeying and resisting.

When well-behaved, polite, productive citizens start to feel personally ignored, mistreated and abused by those in power, there are often several stages those people go through. If they’ve always seen themselves as good citizens because they’ve always “followed the rules,” it can be a bit of a shock when they come to realize that “the rules,” more often than not, benefit a few greedy crooks and harm everyone else. What was the last thing you bought? A stick of gum at the convenience store? A meal out at your fa- vourite steakhouse? A new car?

A new car?

And how did you pay for that purchase? If you’re like the majority of people, chances are you paid for it with a card or some form of electronic payment. Consumer card transactions surpassed cash payments for the first time in 2018—and now that Apple Pay, Venmo and other forms of electronic pay- ment are being used in more and more places—electronic payments are becoming more and more common.

It’s not hard to understand why. Cards and electronic payments are convenient, easy to use, relatively quick—and they’re a natural extension of the ever-increasing digitalization of the global economy.

But the Human Spirit has all ways trended towards freedom, in spite of the Sociopaths and Psycho- paths that seek collective dominance over our lives to enrich their needs and desires. But what if the Human Spirit IS the target? What if a combination of Physical, Psychological and Political manipulation had an organized goal to strip you of your will and ability to resist mas- sive amounts of information?

McEnery wrote, “The most dangerous man to any government is the man who is able to think things out... without regard to the perpetuation of the system. Almost inevitably he comes to the conclusion that the government he lives under is dishonest, insane, in- terrible. OUGHTROWING TYRANNY: 13 Liberty-Learning Essentials for Every Aspect of Your Life

By Paul Rosenberg

If you're like most of us, you probably have grand-parents or great-grand-parents who worked hard, earned money, and improved their situation in life. It was normal in those days. But you work just as hard and make far less progress.

And there is good reason for this. When Great-gramps worked hard, he kept the money.

In those days before mass-taxation and flat currency, young men would go out to make their fortune. (“Fortune” being enough money to finance your future.) They'd go where money was being made, work hard, cooperate, learn from the older men, save, learn how to succeed, then return home as a prosperous adult.

Not every young man went out for big fortune, and some certainly failed, but these things were much easier than they are today. Gathering a fortune was common enough that it was built into the mating strategy of the time. Many women would agree to marry a man who had a little bit of money “made something of himself.” This was generally a far healthier strategy than what developed in its wake.

The graph to the right depicts the difference between you and your great-grandfather.

The top line shows how many years of living expenses your great-grandfather would have accumulated as a hard-working young man. The bottom line shows what you can save. (And yes, this graph is based on actual data, but I would go through it all here.)

After working for five years, Great-gramps had seven years of living expenses in the bank. Doing the same things, you'd have less than two.

In the modern world, every- one's fortune is taxed away as it is being formed, and what is saved is eroded by the burdens of healthy pretense and currency. Nowadays nearly everyone works all their lives, just to stay even.

With surplus removed from individuals, people can't really save, and so they survive by taking on endless streams of loans. And that is not healthy.

Grandma wasn't really better off than you… you're more of less the same.

This affects everything including charity. And only does the system make it almost impossible for you to give, that you insist you feel it. Then they give a small portion of the money they skimmed from you to the poor and call themselves super-saints.

Your great-grandparents were proud to help their friends and neighbors. They felt good about themselves, their self perception was of strong character, and they felt compassion for others, and they were proud to make the world a better place. Being rebuffed by this heritage was far worse than the lie of surplus.

Now is the time for you to reclaim your moral confidence.

Where Virtues Still Thrive

Please don’t waste your time trying to reform a system gone mad. Much things need to fall on their own, and Buckingham Fuller was ever so right when he wrote this.

You never change anything by fighting the existing. To make a change, you need a new model and make the existing obsolete.

And I’m pleased to tell you that you needn’t wait for a new model to be born. You can find out how to do this if you want to. You’ve got half a million grannies in El Salvador doing it, for goodness sake. Get a Bitcoin wallet, get lightning, and start buying things using Bitcoin. And keep buying until you stop buying.

Silver and gold are fine too, by the way. But you have to use them. You have to buy and sell with them. Stacking them on a shelf and looking at them won’t build the kind of world you want to live in.

So, if you want to reclaim the honest work of our grandparents, crypto will get you there. But I’m not talking about getting rich on a bubble, I’m talking about saving and investing.

You can find out how to do this if you want to. You’ve got half a million grannies in El Salvador doing it, for goodness sake. Get a Bitcoin wallet, get lightning, and start buying things using Bitcoin. And keep buying until you stop buying.

Propaganda Defined

According to The Graduate School of Political Management at George Washington University, "Since propaganda and public relations both share the goal of using mass communication to influence public perception, it can be easy to confuse the two. Propaganda, however, traffics in lies, misinformation, inflammatory language, and other negative communication to achieve an end related to a cause, goal or political agenda."

Britannica affirms this thought by defining propaganda as “dissemination of information—facts, arguments, rumors, half-truths or lies—to influence public opinion, usually to promote the cause of an individual, group, or organization.”

The Oxford English Dictionary states that it is “the systematic dissemination of information, esp. in a biased or misleading way, in order to promote a political cause or point of view”.

Modern propaganda was defined by Edward Bernays (1891-1995) in the early 1920s. Bernays is credited as being the “father of public relations”, but many of the ideas came from his uncle, psychia- trist Sigmund Freud. Neither were friends of society.

According to Bernays, “Those who manipulate this unseen mechanism of society constitute an invisible government which is the true ruling power of our country... we are dominated by the relatively small number of persons who understand the mental processes and social patterns of the masses. It is they who pull the wires which control the public mind.”

The Intent To Deceive Is Nev- er Right

While individuals can certainly lie and deceive on their own initiative, propaganda is invariably seen in the realm of governments and corporations that use instruments of mass communications to control behavior.

To be clear, all propaganda in- tense and deceptively manipulates emotions to create a change in personal and group behavior. Further, the most effective propa- gandists lay traps in advance for would-be critics.

Notably, propaganda works best when people don’t notice it.

Fortunately, recognizing propa- ganda is simple once you understand its fundamental techniques, all of which have been clearly identified and validated throughout decades.

The following standardized propaganda techniques, recognized and well-documented by many au- thorities and professional scholars, are used in various combinations to achieve a desired behavioral out- come.

The Techniques of Propaganda

Fear: The most powerful emo- tion, fear of loss or physical harm is used to get people to accept the solu- tions provided by the propagandist, that would not otherwise have been accepted. The technique of fear has been the foundation of all propaganda since the days of the Roman Empire.

Bandwagon: A claim is made that because everyone else is doing it, you should do it too. This is often combined with other propaganda techniques. “Everyone is taking the shot because it is safe and effective; you should take it, too.”

Card Stacking: This technique highlights the “good” information while leaving out the “bad.” In other words, the facts that support the propagandist’s agenda are pre- sented while information that is in- tensionally suppressed. Censorship is rampant in media, social media and search engines.

Plain Folk: The propagandist implies that he is just an ordi- nary person like you, with the same dreams and desires, and therefore you should believe him.

The Testimonial: Using an un- related person such as a celebrity, to give testimony that the propa- gandist or his cause is valid. For example, parents who protest at school board meetings are now labeled as “do- mestic terrorists” who commit “hate crimes.”

Scapegoat: This technique uses guilt-by-association to blame an unrelated person, e.g., eco- nomic woes caused by the current administration are blamed on previous administration, the ongo- ing pandemic is caused by the un- vaccinated.

Logical Disconnect: The World Economic Forum states, “You will own nothing and be happy.” This is a logical disconnect; owning nothing but this is totally illogical from experience. A corollary to this might well be “Homeless people are happy, therefore they must be happy.”

Name Calling/Deception: Ad hominem techniques lay traps in advance for would-be critics.

What you can do about it

All these techniques target our emotions, which in turn drive our behavior. Without our emotional “support” and compliance, the propa- gandist simply falls silent in the floor and dies.

Of course, the intelligent citi- zen does not want anyone to manipu- late his emotions, but that is not his own first place. Indeed, no one wants to be tricked, duped, deceived, used or manipulated by someone else.

There are two very clear anti- dotes to stopping propaganda dead in its tracks.

First, the propaganda must be objectively identified and seen for what it is. With the techniques listed above, this is very easy to do. Second, considering what you see, you must exercise self-control over your emotions. Propaganda always demands your emotional involvement to achieve its ends. Do not fall into the propaganda’s trap.

Lastly, when you finally claim victory over any element of propa- ganda – that is, you’ve identified it and refused emotional involvement with it – it is important to share your understanding and experience with others.

Conclusion

Keep this information handy whenever you are listening, viewing or reading the news. Analyze every article for its “propaganda” elements. If you notice that one technique be- ing used, take it as a clue and look for others.

If enough Americans under- stand these simple markers of propa- ganda, committing to stopping it in its tracks, then life in America could get better in a hurry.

Remember, propagandists are self-interested, caring nothing about you or your public at-large. In order to overcome it, it is not necessary to know the full game plan is what it being laid out in the first place; the mere fact that it is propaganda tells you that they have nothing to do with it.

Is Propaganda Free Speech?

Throughout history, robust security fraud and requiring issuer disclosures, the contract defense of money misrepresentation; and the law of precaution.

All this is to say that while Free speech provides a great latitude of expression, it is always constrained by legal and ethical boundaries.

is lying and deception Free Speech? No, never!

When propagandists hide be- hind the argument of Free Speech, they are using it as a propaganda technique to deceive you even fur- ther.

Don’t Give Up on the Blessings of Freedom

By John Whitehead

“All I am doing is giving you a chance...—John Lennon

How do you give thanks for freedoms that are constantly being eroded?

How do you express gratitude for one’s safety when the perils posed by the American police state grow more treacherous by the day?

How do you come together as a nation in thanksgiving when the food is scarce and the money runs out and we divide into warring factions?

Every year finds us struggling to reconcile our hope for a better world with the thought of an escalating of violence and war that continues to grow.

Fifty years ago, John Lennon released his hit song “Imagine” to exhorted us to “Imagine all the people living life in peace.” That same year, the United States was embroiled in the Vietnam War.

Peace remains out of reach. Activists and whistleblowers continue to be prosecuted for challenging the illegitimate and illegal wars abroad. Militarily, there is no end, while the whole government apparatus is being deployed to thrive on havoc on innocent lives.

For those of us who joined with John Lennon to recognize that the world was not free and to choose to imagine the world, it’s getting harder and harder to imagine what it means to be free, to have an idea of a country and a world that is not at war. It means a world of peace, it’s getting harder and harder to imagine a world without violence, want, and tyranny that is worth living in.

Fifty years later, we clearly don’t want to see the kind of world that is emerging. A high-profile example of the lengths they will go to persecute those who dare to challenge the rapacious and rich they say is the only way to achieve an end to hunger, violence, war, and tyranny that is worth living in.

And those who do dare to speak up and speak out are not only being targeted but may be convicted of crimes that do not exist. They are being targeted by the Deep State, which is the only permanent solution to the book controversy in public schools. Rather than engage in public (i.e., over the format for Sunday services).

There would be compulsory church attendance laws for children, as well as church buses to transport them to church. There would be religious books to promote or display in public. There would also be fights over which version of the Bible to use. People would be being taught about the religious doctrines to adopt. There would be forever wars over the format for Sunday services. They would not be able to have their literature classes or church services.

There would be religious books similar to what they are trying to impose in public schools, rather than engage in public education, we are seeing a push to have church attendance laws for children, as well as church buses to transport them to church. There would be religious books to promote or display in public and separate school and state and bring religion into public schools. 3. A social-cultural revolution that took place in 70 million human beings was slaughtering and then “build back better” continues in the same state. Americans should not have elected Biden and inherited his “Build Back Better” ideology. Terrorizing across America, coupled with shooting food shortages, are the ultimate goals of build back better, as in build back with better to exterminate the undesirable.

Refuse to remain silent. Take a stand. Speak up. Speak out. Recognize that you can’t turn away from suffering.

Find something to be thankful for about the things and people in your life that you might have the least tolerance for. After that, make a list of 10 things you are thankful for. Take a deep breath and acknowledge the good in those things. You may have underestimated or feared.

When time comes to give thanks for your good fortune, put your gratitude into action. Pay your blessings forward with deeds that make the world a better place.

One by one, they linked hands to continue the peaceful protest. The path would not be easy, but the journey was more than worth it.

Engage in acts of kindness. Smile more. Fight less. Build bridges. Refuse to let toxic politics drive you and others into a dark corner.

Biden will soon be taking his place on the genocidal track of a new American President. His “Build Back Better” strategy which first destroys a nation before building it back better “is being realized in its early stages by the American people.

This article examines one small part, state-sponsored food deprivation, of the “Build Back Better” strategy which first destroys a nation before building it back better “to a Marxist Communist nation.

Food As a Destructive Force

Food riots and ultimately food wars are coming. Food deprivation will be used, in the near future, to help America to its knees and force compliance from a population that is being corrupted by the continuous takeover of our government that has just taken place.

In the previous installment of the survival series, the following facts were established:

1. Bill Gates has become the new owner of American farmland.
2. Biden’s new 45% capital gains tax, with no offsets, will make it impossible for the vast majority of families to save.
3. The food supply chain is permanently broken. Fertiliz-ergas prices, impacting the cost of food.
4. The meat packing plants are still closed.
5. Large corporate farms are growing at an alarming rate.

Inside Italy and Europe’s Fight for Freedom

By Alessandro Fusillo

Italy and Europe are right in the middle of what future historians will aptly call World War III. The Book of Lord Shang, the basic text of Chinese legalism, says that if a King, if he wants to be powerful and invincible, first of all needs to learn how to wage war against his own subjects. Only once he will have learnt this kind of war, will he be ready for wars to conquer further territories and subjects. Who will lose World War III? Here the answer is very easy. As in any other war the people will lose it. We already see it: suicides are on the rise, the economy is in shambles, families are torn, and an unusual surge of sudden and unexplainable deaths are the sign of an unconventional but nonetheless deadly war.

Why Italy and why Europe? The explanation comes from history. The current war, put in its right historical context, seems far less ry. The current war, put in its right historical context, seems far less strange than a casual onlooker may think. Old Europe and its American outposts on the other side of the Atlantic, Ocean are the cradle of what is called Western Civilization. In the nutshell it is the – probably fortuitous – result of the fusion between ancient Roman and Greek culture and the Christian revolution. When the Roman Empire committed a fiscal suicide straining itself with the unbearable weight of its own bureaucracy, standing army, and government officials the baffled barbarians, who were often hailed as liberators, were the unwaviling heirs to a cultural tradition that, as Sertinop says in his wonderful hook, inadvertently had invented the individual. The individual was the creator of capitalism and of the ideas that would later lead to the tradition of liberalism. Since the Middle Ages Italy was the place where capitalism was invented, commerce, double-entry bookkeeping, banking, navigational skills were the features of the astonishing Italian economic development. This led to an incredibly rich country that always awakened foul appetites from any European power that had the occasion to grab a piece of the great Italian pie. Italians always were too busy making money or creating works of art or discovering new worlds to be distracted by such a dirty game as politics. Only the worst among them deemed politics as an honourable occupation. Machiavelli’s respectable political philosophy is a case in point.

What Italians simply did, without bothering too much about founding a philosophical explanation, was explained first by the Spanish School of Salamanca and later by the English liberal tradition. This gave rise to the one and only experiment in human history of a government that, at least in its beginnings, had the mission to leave the people alone and to limit itself to the bare minimum. Meanwhile we know that this is a utopian project. Today, as the monster is when it is born, it will develop to a Leviathan. Despite the blatant betrayal of the American founding fathers by their unworthy descendants, the United States of America managed to become the richest and the most powerful country in the world because it left free reins to human ingenuity and to the power of individual freedom. Admittedly, not all that glitters is gold and not all the glittering things are as they look. Italy was the place where capitalism and of the ideas that would later lead to the tradition of liberalism gave rise to the one and only experiment in human history of a government that, at least in its beginnings, had the mission to leave the people alone and to limit itself to the bare minimum. But today Italy is the place where capitalism and its dress code of the native Americans, but the rest of the world cannot boast a great track-record either if respect for other human beings is concerned.

Shorty after freedom and capitalisms gave rise to the USA, their deadliest enemy made its ugly head collectivism. It comes with different flavours and guises, communism, socialism, fascism, nationalism, social democracy, climate change policy, you name it, but it has a clear mission: destroying the individual and private property. If liberalism has been correctly defined as the unrestricted respect for other people’s project of life (Bentonsar Lynchs collectivism is the exact opposite. It is the denial of a project of life whatsoever. Collectivism is the philosophy according to which a tiny elite of experts knows better than the rest of humanity what future his-

In a cashless world, there would be no lower bound on interest rates. Such interest rates, which are negative, would reduce the policy rate from say, 2 percent to minus 4 percent to counter a severe recession. The interest rate cut would transmit to bank deposits, loans, and bonds. Without cash, depositors would have to pay the negative interest rate to keep their money with the bank, making consumption and investment more attractive. This would jolt lending, boost demand, and stimulate the economy.

This is the new world that is coming into view. A world where every transaction is monitored, catalogued and databased in real time. If that prospect doesn’t send shivers down your spine, it should. For such a world brings with it the potential for banks to track, monitor, and control our every financial move. If you have a hard time conceiving what such a world would look like, here’s a handy video that the ACLU created way back in 2006 for you to start to understand the Big Brother implications of a cashless society.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R7NDFDcHc

By this point, we can see how such a vast surveillance system threatens our freedom to make our own financial decisions. But the problem seems overwhelming. How can we even begin to fight the war on cash? After all, when was the last time you sat down for an honest round table discussion with the central banks at a BIS meeting?

The good news is that we don’t need some elaborate plan or high-level access to thwart this cashless agenda. The tools we need to preserve our economic independence are already in our wallets and cash. Isn’t this difficult to understand? If the bankers don’t want us using cash, then cash is our weapon against their agenda of control.

The desire to push back is the impetus behind Cash Friday! a new showing of the benefits of cash implemented by Katherine Austin Fitts of Financial Impulse. A new event every Friday.

We don’t know who’s using a $10 bill today and we don’t know who’s using a 1,000 peso bill today. The key difference with the CRD is that the central bank will have absolute control over the rules and regulations that will determine the use of that expression of central bank liability. And so it is easier to use the technology to enforce that.

The number of business listings on the site also exploded. Today we have 241 agorist businesses listed, with more frequently added.

At the end of 2020 I added the Freedom Post main menu item to Agorist.Market with publication of FREEDOM AGENDA 2.1 which is now at the bottom of that linked page. That timeless article presented many ways to achieve more freedom in your life, including agorist activity.

In June of 2021, Erin expanded this activity to every Black Friday with BlackMarketFridays.com which now also redirects to Agorist.Market. New banners were added and the site was Gonk was added to raise visibility of supporting him.

In October 2021 we had 5,488 visits to the home page that redirected to the IPFS version of the site which has no statistics capability (that’s real privacy). We don’t know how many more went direct to IPFS.

People are encouraged to bookmark the IPFS website address, in case they, the state beast with all of its banksters, block the site in the future.

Now at the bottom of that linked page is a list of sites the student operates.

So, how much silver is in a face value dollar? Notice the worth of the US sil-coins? Very early in my precious metals experience I figured out that you could expect to be "9 ounces because of the 90% silver. I was wrong" the refers to silver being "90% silver and 10% copper. The current price of silver is usually about 54 cents per ounce. The current value of this "durable coin" that was less likely to lose silver was somewhere around the .7234 ounces of silver.

One dollar's worth of these coins contained .7234 ounces of silwhen they were newly minted. Since the majority of what we now has been well circulated, most honest dealers will use .735 ounces to account for the average wear of the coins. Whether you have ten dimes, quarters or two half dollars, or any combination equal to one dollar, you have 715 ounces of silver. This is enough for 500 of the .90% ounces of copper.

So, here's the math:

90% silver US coins used to be widely accepted throughout the world as silver coins. Coins have gotten scarce in the recent years but still won't take to face "50" in exchange for a "10". I'm not likely to want to let them go. Silver stackers are looking for higher silver prices over the long term for potential for barter or exchange.

This has caused prices to climb to well over $20 per face value dollar in the futures market if you can

But even at these higher prices, it is less expensive than Silver Eagles where you don't get to value the barter in less than one ounce incre-

THEM BACK-
An awful truth that most de-velopers and tech company CEOs don’t want to admit is that many of the security exploits, malware, and cyber attacks that plague every computer (including your smart-phone) often come down to the fact that the code running on the com-puter you own—be it your Smart-phone or your PC—wasn’t net in the world. Security wasn’t a concern, because the software developers’ sensibilities, their code would never leave your computer. Your privacy is not special, it’s normal. Not at all! A corporation or government that doesn’t even look at your data without bursting into your home and stealing your (PC, and back then people/commu-nities didn’t look to kind of on that kind of intrusion.

Is this shortsightedness on the developer’s part? Or did they realize something that eludes our present interconnected society?

I would argue the latter. And that’s why we need to grab your data/information local. You can consider this the digital ver-sion of the popular “Go Local” cam-paigns. And just like it’s easy to find a job of your dreams in this business, you assure it’s just as easy to find software and apps that actu-ally let you use them locally, on your device, not on some corporate server, or unsavory prying eyes.

Now, I’m not saying you shouldn’t encrypt your data, or that you can’t connect to other devices remotely, as long as you are keeping your data safely elsewhere. There just are a couple of things to keep in mind:

- Make sure your data is backed up, just in case something happens to your device.
- Don’t share your data unnecessarily with others.
- Be mindful of the data you are sharing.

But it’s not necessary. We al-ready have the tools at our disposal for managing our data safely and securely. The choice is yours, as always.

Let’s be honest, there’s no such thing as “the Cloud” – only some-one else’s computer. And would you really trust that picture, that video, that file, that whatever-file on someone else’s computer and call it “your” data? I mean, can all operatic-ally sing in unison: “Nope.”

So, you ask, how do you keep your data safe? Here’s a quick run-down on how you can start installing software that will allow you to use your devices and communicate.

STEP 1:

1. Get Your Data In Order:
   - Make sure you have a backup of all important files.
   - Print out or scan any physical documents you need to keep.
   - Use a password manager to keep track of all your passwords.

2. Choose a Secure Cloud Service:
   - Research different cloud services to find one that meets your needs.
   - Look for features such as end-to-end encryption, two-factor authentication, and robust privacy policies.

3. Set Up Two-Factor Authentication:
   - This additional layer of security can help protect your data from unauthorized access.

4. Enable Encryption:
   - Ensure that your files are encrypted both in transit and at rest to prevent unauthorized access.

5. Use Strong Passwords:
   - Avoid using easy-to-guess passwords like “password123” or “letmein.”
   - Use a password manager to generate strong, unique passwords for each account.

6. Regularly Update Your Software:
   - Ensure that your operating system and all installed applications are up to date to protect against vulnerabilities.

7. Be Careful With What You Share:
   - Only share sensitive information with trusted individuals and organizations.

8. Use Secure Networks:
   - Avoid using public Wi-Fi networks for sensitive activities.

9. Enable Two-Factor Authentication:
   - Enable two-factor authentication wherever possible to add an extra layer of security.

10. Limit Access:
    - Restrict access to your data and applications to only authorized users.

STEP 2:

11. Set Up a Private Cloud Server:
    - Consider setting up a private cloud server on your home network to store data securely.
    - Popular choices include Synology, QNAP, and Nextcloud.

12. Use a VPN:
    - A virtual private network (VPN) can help encrypt your data and ensure that it is transmitted securely.

13. Use End-to-End Encryption:
    - Use end-to-end encrypted messaging and file sharing apps to protect sensitive communications.

14. Regularly Back Up:
    - Schedule regular backups to ensure that you can recover your data in the event of a security breach or data loss.

15. Stay Informed:
    - Keep up-to-date with the latest security news and trends to stay ahead of potential threats.

STEP 3:

16. Educate Yourself:
    - Take courses or attend webinars to learn more about cybersecurity best practices.

17. Work with a Cybersecurity Professional:
    - Consider hiring a cybersecurity consultant to help you set up and maintain a secure environment.

18. Stay Open-Minded:
    - Be open to new technologies and changes in the cybersecurity landscape.

19. Never Give Up:
    - Cybersecurity is an ongoing battle, and it requires ongoing effort to stay safe.

In conclusion, protecting your data is crucial in today’s interconnected world. By following these steps, you can help safeguard your data and ensure that it remains secure. Remember, the most secure system is the one that you don’t use and the only way to truly protect your data is to be vigilant and proactive in your cybersecurity practices.

In effect, we are redefining education and what we truly want for our children.

For the next step, you’ll want to consider what to do about your child who is not doing well in school. You might be tempted at first to simply not go to school. However, this is not the solution. It’s better to take a proactive approach by discussing things with your child’s teacher (I discuss more below).

The ultimate goal of home-schooling is to create a safe and nurturing environment for your child. This can be accomplished by focusing on self-directed learning.

So, let’s review some educational options for your child.

Private schooling is when you send your child to a school that you choose. This can be a great option if you have the resources and want to provide a specific education for your child.

Career centers are a good option for someone with little experience (your teenager) to learn new skills.

The only way to be more certain of your food source today. Please join us in becoming a part of the community that the farmers and the community that the farmers establish relationship with a sustainable food system dependent lifestyle and the resilient sustainable rural lifestyle.

FarmMatch is meant to be a bridge between the two.

FarmMatch is a website that connects people to local direct-selling farms and allows them to order their food from that farm’s own online store. It uses the simple convenience of the online store to facilitate the wholesome old-world relationship between the farmer and his customers. It secures a direct source of farm fresh food for buyers and it makes farms financially sustainable by cutting out the middle-men.

Everything is about relationships. And food is no different.

For thousands of years farmers and their families ran the plants and animals, and kept the humankind of their communities fed. The community knew their farmers and bought their food directly from their farmers.

But these days we’ve lost our connection to our land, our food, and our farmers. We’ve lost the ability to keep our food supply intact and sustainable and humane. As our communities grow, and cities become harder and harder for us to produce our food ourselves or get our food directly from a local farm. We replaced our direct relationships with farmer with big box stores and we added the cost of the transportation, supply lines to our food prices. These additional marketing and distribution network costs now take over half of every food dollar and the pressure to lower prices to compensate for all these added costs (not to mention monetary inflation) meant many farms went out of business. The survivors began to use tents, perform worrying, chemical and genetic experiments on the food they grew and in the end produce nutritionally inferior food. It’s tough for them to become harder to trace where our food comes from, whether it is re-spublication and humanized raised and whether it is even safe!

During times of instability this unhealthy, unsustainable food production model with its sprawling distribution network is the achilles heel of the urban world. Many see the writing on the wall that depending on this model continues crumbling forever is horribly mistaken.

Some choose to move out into the country and start growing their own food, but most people without the skills and resources to achieve this don’t know where to begin.

There is this insurmountable gap between the centralized-food system dependent lifestyle and the resilient sustainable rural lifestyle.

FarmMatch is meant to be a bridge between the two.

FarmMatch is a website that connects people to local direct-selling farms and allows them to order their food from that farm’s own online store. It uses the simple convenience of the online store to facilitate the wholesome old-world relationship between the farmer and his customers. It secures a direct source of farm fresh food for buyers and it makes farms financially sustainable by cutting out the middle-men.

Everything is about relationships. And food is no different.

The farms on FarmMatch sell direct and make deliveries to their local areas and usually also deliver into the nearby cities. So food buyers in the city can build relationships with farmers that a continual on if they decide to move out to the country for the security and quality of life.

Having a direct relationship with a farmer means a nationwide food crisis is not nearly as concerning since you are not a part of the centralized national food system.

There is only one link in your supply chain and that is your farmer. The only way to be more certain of your food is to produce it yourself. And even if you grow much of your own food, it is good to network with local farms for things you might not have as well as having a contingency for crop failures. Those who have an established relationship with a sustainable local farm will be the ones who have priority access to the limited supply of food when demand is high.

These farms can also avoid most of the overregulation of the food system. The obscure bybodies of the government appear to be compelled to tell you what you can and cannot do. The mechanism of control is access to the food supply chain. By de-necting from the farm many states’ enforcement mechanisms are disabled.

Which is why it is so important that accountability is direct and you don’t need a noisy third-party approach or disapproving of what you eat.

And even if there isn’t enough up being major shocks to the food system, don’t we want to have a more sustainable, accountable, and personal food system? By buying directly from your local farmers you can take back the power from Big Ag, Big Chemical, Big Pharma, and Big Government and bring it back to the direct (and to me sacred) relationship between the farmer and the food eater.

Proper farming is a harmonious integration of the soil, the plants, the animals, the farmers, and the community that the farmers feed. It cares for and supports all of these vital contributions to the farm. Please join us in becoming a part of the FarmMatch community and help us decentralize the food system by securing your food source today.

For basic math, you can start with shopping in the grocery store and helping your child understand numbers by how much things cost. As they get older, they can start to buy some things and this is the real world application for addition and subtraction.

In fact, I propose that the most logical, transformational solution to empower children in the 21st cen-ury is to “Get All The Thinkers Out of forced schooling!”

Every right to your end of life is restricted by the Crown, because it considers it its property. Among pirates the Crown’s tyrannies are irrelevant. A pirate ship you own your own body, without qualification. When a medical practice is built upon that immutable fact, the Crown’s meddling becomes impotent. Prices decrease, the Alliance constructs an ever expanding administrative and regulatory hegemony, to protect their boondoggles and bureaucracies. They sabotage the development of new treatments, enforce patent monopolies, discredit sound scientific research, deny access to alternative remedies and mandate damaging and unwanted treatments, while callously ignoring the victims left dying on waiting lists. The personal, dehumanizing experience of The Crown’s nationals and non-nationals.

Open Ocean Medicine facilitates the ability of healers and customers to build a relationship of mutual respect and consent. Collaboration to explore treatment options help the patient determine health and lifestyle goals they consider important. Any system of command and control that disadvantages the individual is rejected.

Medical technologies are accelerating to the point that we can increase human performance beyond regular health. Artificial intelligence, nanotechnology, gene engineering, cloning, robotics, and brain-computer integration could take the human condition to a level of advancement never before imagined, providing new journeys of self-discovery that escape time and space. A world of vast possibilities appears on the horizon. We are facing the greatest revolution in all of human history!

Our government is responsible for our well-being, our communities, our lives.

Governments are responsible for our health, education, safety, and well-being. They are accountable to the people they govern. However, in recent years, governments have increasingly prioritized economic interests over the well-being of their citizens. This has led to a situation in which governments are no longer accountable to the people they govern, and in many cases, they are actually working against the interests of their citizens.

This is due, in part, to the influence of corporations and special interest groups. These groups often have more money, political power, and resources than the average citizen, and they use this power to pressure governments to make decisions that benefit their interests rather than those of the public.

As a result, it has become increasingly difficult for citizens to hold their governments accountable. This has led to a growing sense of disempowerment and alienation among citizens, as they feel that their voices are not being heard and that their government is working against their interests.

This is why it is important for citizens to become informed about the issues that affect their lives and to participate in the political process. This can be done by voting, writing to elected officials, attending public meetings, and joining local organizations that are working to promote the interests of their citizens.

In the end, it is up to each of us to take responsibility for our own well-being and to hold our governments accountable for the decisions they make.

The sciences contradict what we are being told by many medical doctors, the media, our government officials and the pharmaceutical industry about the safety and effectiveness of vaccines. We are told time and time again, that vaccines are extremely safe and effective and that “the science is settled” on the matter. Well I have news for those who think so. There are thousands of scientists and researchers that disagree. And, you are about to meet those who care enough to say so. The bottom line is that THE SCIENCE IS FAR FROM SETTLED.

My Purpose and Passion

This project has been a monumental task. But it needed to be done! I am currently involved legislatively and by writing articles, speaking, educating and working behind the scenes with some of the most prominent individuals and groups to turn the tide in this immense and urgent effort. By sharing truth and facts, the science and the stories of vaccine injured children and adults, we will push back against mandates and the stripping of our rights and freedoms over the sovereignty of our bodies and those of our children.

I truly have a passion and a love for helping people. That passion is magnified when it comes to the health and welfare of children. When I see families affected by these developmental conditions including autism, and the devastating personal, relational, occupational, marital and economic challenges they face, it saddens and frustrates me. Many are wealthy, happy, fully-developing and functioning child one day and then lost that child into a shell of their previous selves the next. The rest of their lives have been forever changed, often in an instant. While both sides in this issue fight to protect the affected children and the families are innocent bystanders and are being either ignored or used as pawns to advance an agenda. This project has been a monumental task. But it needed to be done. Year End 2021: The State of the World

As for flying East next Spring, I survived the tumultuous transformation of our nation’s once charming and attractive storefronts into busy ‘flight attendants’ more reminiscent of Bia, Sea-of-the SS. I then subsequently survived the gleeful use of the 9/11 attacks by the airlines corporate bean-counters as an excuse to replace but in-flight meals with nothing but little bags of fish-shaped cheese crackers (fill those up wise enough to purchase a “Subway” sandwich and stow it in your carry-on have now learned to buy two, a second one to share rather than watch our seat-mats stare at us like starved Displaced Persons as we chew down somewhere over Cincinnati.)

But I fear the prospect of breathing through a medically useless face-diaper for six hours or more – an indignity soon to be greatly enhanced by the imposition of “Proof of Vaccination” and Six-Times-A-Year Booster Compliance Internal Passports, presumably to be downloadable through some “onto” a cell phone I don’t possess, has finally barred me from air travel until some level of sanity is restored. Though even New York and California elected officials shouting “Come back! Bring our tax revenues and Come back”, once we’ve learned we can live with out them, why would we?

Thus endeth my brief update on “The State of Things” in my long-suffering Wesleyan classroom.

So I suppose I could have just sent him my essay of last March, titled “Like watching a car full of drunken teenagers slide sideways on the ice”! http://vinceupnorth.com

Our love to all, this November Thanksgiving week in the chilly High Mogue.

To eliminate misunderstandings, let’s define what taxes are, it is helpful to define the word “theft.” One good definition is “the wrongful taking and carrying away of the personal goods of another.” The definition does not go on to say, “unless you’re the government.”

There is no difference, in principle, between the State taking property and a street gang doing so, except that the State’s theft is “legal” and its agents are immune from prosecution. Many people do not accept that analogy, because the government is widely viewed as being, of, for, and by the people, even though it is also acknowledged as acting badly from time to time.

Now let’s suppose that this mugger convinces most of his friends that it’s okay for him to relieve you of your wallet. Would it still be theft? Suppose now that he said he wanted your wallet to feed another hungry person, not himself. Would it still be theft?

The tendency of taxation is to create a class of persons who do not labor, to take from those who do labor the produce of that labor, and to give it to those who do not labor.

Where Your Grandparents’ Values Can Still Be Found

let and start doing business. If the grannys can do it, so can you; you only have to try.

In the crypto-economy, there’s no one with a monopoly on the money supply, and no one who can distort Everything by printing money as they like. In the crypto-economy things are honest, and that breeds virtue, just like it did in Great-Grandpa’s time.

But, if you want to work in a virtue-based economy, you should, if you want to build an honest and less unfair world (it still won’t be perfect), if you want to actually matter in the world... then the answer is sitting right in front of you. So how badly do you actually want this?

Vaccines are NOT tested for carcinogenic effect, even though there are carcinogenic ingredients IN the vaccines! How convenient! They do not do the safety testing that would bring down the house of cards. It is no wonder why cancer continues to be on the rise, and more children than ever before in history are diagnosed with cancer, as the childhood vaccine schedule continues to increase! The United States gives 2-3x more vaccines to children than any other developed country, yet we have more chronic health issues—such as autism, childhood diabetes, food allergies, childhood cancer, sudden infant death, developmental and speech delays, tics, ADHD, purpura, autism, lupus, arthritis, eczema, seizures, etc.

A deficiency worth mentioning, since we are lied to about almost everything, including the importance of vitamin D, from the hole, after my grandfather was diagnosed with stomach cancer back in 1997, after a year of suffering with stomach pains, and told him he only had a few months to live. He refused chemo. Brilliant of him, but I had no idea just how smart that decision was at the time. With mitigation I began my research into natural healing. I refused to believe the doctors who gave no hope. My grandfather had seen enough friends that had suffered from the poisoning of chemotherapy only to die anyway—and he wasn’t going to duplicate the path of poisoning himself to death. In my research, I quickly discovered that the body is capable of healing, when given what it needs to thrive, and is cut off from toxicity. I read countless stories of people who were told they wouldn’t live past a few weeks or months, who were still sharing their stories 10 – 25 years later! My grandfather embarked on a holistic path of healing his body, with me cheering him on every step of the way. He saw progress, and was feeling better, until a stroke landed him back into hospital. “care”, where he basically starved his body to death on the palliative floor (the floor where they wait for the patient to die). Absolutely denigrating the body given. It’s criminal. It’s evil. I was forever changed by the experience, and vowed never to let my children be pushed in deeply, QUESTIONING EVERYTHING.

So, why do they push chemo so hard? It is over $500 billion a year moneymaker for pharma!

Let’s tie the cancer issue to vaccines now.

13. Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, Impairment of Fertility

RECOM BIVAX HB has not been elevated for its carcinogenic or mutagenic potential, or its potential to impair fertility [see Use In Specific Populations (81)].

VACCINES

The propaganda push convinces the majority to have their baby covered with toxic chemicals, which as you can imagine has the reverse affect than what we are after! They convinced people in fear of the sun (the sun), and since the PLANdemic of 2020, the AIB too? Fear nature, and embrace toxic chemicals (like sunscreen). It is astounding! Humans have co-existed for thousands and thousands of years with the sun. It is ESSENTIAL to our good health. What happens when information cards or flyers and encourage them to research. If you’re shy, leave a card in the credit card slot after fueling up the car, and in public places. Let’s spread this knowledge far and wide. Be Bold! Be Brave! Be The Change!
